Owner Experience Review

Owners of the 318SSX Super Sport by MONTEREY commonly cite its dual role as a capable dayboat and a bona fide weekender. The cockpit with sunpad and the wet bar are frequently praised for social outings, while the cabin's twin berths, enclosed head, and compact galley permit practical overnighting—some owners even reference trips from Miami to the Bahamas. Though smaller than full size cabin cruisers, the layout is thoughtfully executed and several pre owned hulls have been reported to present with minimal wear.

On the water the deep V hull (roughly 21–22 degrees) is noted for slicing through chop with a firmer, more controlled motion, and the boat handles with agility for a 31' sterndrive. With twin MerCruiser V 8s, owners report brisk planing and top speeds typically in the mid 50s up to around 60 mph depending on engine spec and load. The helm can be demanding at first because of the number of switches and instruments. Regular MerCruiser maintenance is standard; owner forums mention occasional recurring items such as fuel sender/analog gauge irregularities and periodic attention to seat hinges or cockpit hardware, and pre purchase surveys often include pulling

PCM run history and fault codes.

Pros and Cons

- Deep V hull provides a firm, composed ride through chop.
- Twin engines deliver nimble handling and quick planing for a 31' sterndrive.
- Two berths, an enclosed head, and a small galley enable authentic weekend cruising.
- Owners report some fuel sender and analog fuel gauge inconsistencies.
- Cockpit seat hinges and related hardware may need periodic repair or adjustment.
- A busy helm with many switches and gauges creates a noticeable learning curve.
