Owner Experience Review

Owners describe the 120 SportYacht by PALMER JOHNSON as a true sport yacht that encourages frequent use—more like a very large day boat than a traditional long range cruiser. In practice, families tend to split time between Mediterranean and Caribbean seasons, with occasional private charters when the schedule allows. Underway, the boat feels quick and responsive, running as a fast planing/semiplaning aluminium yacht; typical reported figures are around 24 knots for comfortable cruise and roughly 28 knots at the top, aligning with what brokers and past owners cite.

On board, the main deck salon and dining flow into generous exterior entertainment zones, and the four stateroom layout with a large owner's suite matches expectations for a semi custom superyacht of this size. Interior work by Nuvolari & Lenard is consistently praised for guest ergonomics and high end finishes, while beach/garage arrangements make water access straightforward for family days and charter turnover. While sea keeping is regarded as good for an aluminium sport yacht, owners are clear that it is tuned for speed and style rather than blue water passagemaking.

Pros and Cons

• Sporty, responsive handling with planing/semiplaning performance that feels engaging at the helm.
• Four stateroom layout and Nuvolari & Lenard interior deliver strong guest comfort and flow.
• Large outdoor entertainment areas and beach/garage setup suit family cruising and charter use.
• Range and hull form are optimized for coastal/seasonal cruising, not extended ocean passages.
• Aluminium construction and semi custom systems can drive higher refit and maintenance costs.
• Twin MTU 12V 4000 series engines entail material service and overhaul budgeting on older examples.
