OVERVIEW

The 1993 Mako 261 remains a celebrated bluewater center console, prized for its solid construction and composed offshore manners. Powered by twin Yamaha 225 hp outboards, this hull offers the thrust and range to tackle open-water runs, island hops, or a relaxed day on the bay with confidence and reliability.

Its roomy center-console layout creates an uncluttered deck that invites working the rails, entertaining guests, and moving easily from bow to stern. Equally at home chasing pelagics as it is carrying the family for coastal cruising, the 261 delivers a versatile platform that balances serious sportfishing capability with comfortable day-boat refinement.

Thoughtfully appointed for both angling and leisure, the boat is fitted with dual GPS chartplotters, autopilot, a Garmin fuel management system, twin VHF radios, and an upgraded stereo system with amplifiers. Electrical systems include a four-battery bank with a new slow charger, while navigation and anchoring are supported by a compass, two anchors, and approximately 400 feet of rode. Purpose-built for deep dropping, dedicated port and starboard outlets accommodate electric reels, and the renowned Mako deep-V hull ensures a dry, stable, and surefooted ride offshore. The spacious center console design maximizes storage and fishability, and this outboard-powered sportfishing boat comes with a trailer. Turnkey and bluewater ready, the vessel is available for viewing by appointment.
