OVERVIEW

Sleek and sinuously contoured, the Italian-bred flybridge motor yacht sets the tempo for contemporary design. Stroll any marina and you will spot fleets of midrange motoryachts and the occasional true mega-yacht whose outlines and bravura owe a clear debt to Italy's effortless mastery of luxury fashion and maritime savoir-faire.

Enduring design is born where theatrical gestures meet everyday practicality. Note the twin-oval side glazing that expands sightlines aboard modern Italianate motoryachts, the elongated boat deck that throws a cool sweep of shade over the cockpit, and the lower helm that serves as a fully functional command post while dissolving into a beautifully finished, European-style interior. Here a fine cruiser elevates beyond mere conveyance, a flybridge craft that marries the intent of a performance cruiser with the polish of a superyacht.

The Italian-built Aicon 56 realizes this philosophy with particular clarity. Under the hand of designer Fulvio di Simoni, its creamy gelcoat surfaces, poised proportions, and raised exterior layout pull this three-stateroom, three-head flybridge motoryacht well past simply contemporary. It reads as a mid-size luxury yacht with a grand presence, a refined cruising vessel that blends Mediterranean panache with considered ergonomics, and a motor yacht whose modern silhouette and exacting detail proclaim timeless elegance on the water.
