OVERVIEW

The 2015 Azimut 64 Flybridge marries Italian craftsmanship with bluewater capability, stretching to 20.15 m L.O.A. and a broad 5.23 m beam with a shallow 1.51 m draft, and displacing 35,000 kg to deliver poised, planing performance. Conceived as a luxury cruiser for extended voyages, she carries 980 L of fresh water and 3,900 L of fuel, offering the range and reserves to support effortless weekends or longer coastal passages in complete comfort. Propulsion is provided by twin Caterpillar C18 diesels producing 2 × 1,150 HP and showing only 550 hours, enabling a lively 33-knot top speed and an economical 28-knot cruising pace that balances efficiency with exhilarating passage-making. Accommodation is arranged for relaxed family use with 3 cabins and 3 bathrooms, while a separate crew cabin with its own private toilet preserves guest privacy and ensures professional service.

The interior is climate-controlled by a 100,000 BTU air-conditioning system, and electrical autonomy at anchor comes from a Mase 20 kW generator with 660 hours. The galley is specified for consummate onboard hospitality, outfitted with premium Miele appliances including a combination oven, dishwasher, and a 4-burner glass-ceramic hob, and supported by an ice maker, 3 refrigerators, 2 freezers and a Miele washer-dryer to handle everything from morning brunches to elegant evening entertaining.

Deck arrangements make handling and leisure effortless, with an electric windlass and anchor system, hydraulic gangway, hydraulic aft bathing platform for tender stowage and water access, and an electric mooring winch. Ambience and entertainment are enhanced by the Azimut home automation suite, a refined sound system, a TV installation with four screens, and two dining loci — a cockpit table and a flybridge table, both installed in October 2021 — that create inviting alfresco dining and lounging spaces. Safety and reliability are reinforced by three automatic bilge pumps and three large manual pumps, and robust electrical capacity from six service batteries and four engine batteries (installed in 2020), together with shore power connections and battery chargers to keep systems ready. Extended cruising capability is further supported by an onboard watermaker, adding to the yacht's self-sufficiency and family-friendly appeal.

Navigation and control are provided by a comprehensive Raymarine suite including GPS, radar, an on-board computer, autopilot, fish finder, echo sounder, AIS and chart plotter, forming an integrated bridge that makes passagemaking intuitive and secure. Recent maintenance and upgrades — a complete engine service, a new flybridge canopy, fresh main deck carpeting and new upholstery — present this Azimut 64 Flybridge as a meticulously cared-for, turn-key motor yacht combining style, performance and unmistakable elegance on every horizon.
