OVERVIEW

Aicon 85 Flybridge Motor Yacht (2007) — United Arab Emirates

Built by Aicon Yachts with exterior naval architecture executed by the yard and interiors conceived by Italian designer Marco Mannino, this 85-foot flybridge motor yacht marries enduring style with purposeful capability. Her GRP (fiberglass) monohull and fiberglass decks provide robust construction, long-lasting resilience and a remarkably quiet motion through the water, while a 21-foot beam produces an expansive, airy interior volume that suits both cosmopolitan marinas and secluded anchorages along the UAE coastline.

Twin Caterpillar inboard diesel engines give her true sport-yacht character, enabling an effortless 20-knot cruise and spirited runs up to 30 knots when desired. A draft of around 6.6 feet broadens the variety of places she can explore, and a fuel capacity of just over 1,050 gallons, together with freshwater tanks holding approximately 264 gallons, supports confident coastal passages and extended stays away from shore facilities.

Inside, Mannino's refined Italian sensibility is apparent in the light-filled salon and graceful dining spaces, where high-quality joinery and carefully selected materials create a modern, inviting atmosphere. Accommodation is arranged to welcome up to four guests in tranquil staterooms, served by three well-equipped heads for privacy and convenience, while a dedicated crew cabin with berths for two ensures discreet, professional service—true to the expectations of a yacht in this class.

Outside living is central to her design: an ample flybridge offers panoramic lounging and al fresco dining, the sheltered aft cockpit flows directly to the salon for seamless entertaining, and wide side decks lead forward to a generous foredeck that becomes a peaceful retreat at sea or at anchor. At water level, the aft platform allows easy access to swimming and watersports. Located in the United Arab Emirates, this Aicon 85 encapsulates the appeal of a flybridge motor yacht—luxury comfort, sport-boat performance and practical cruising capability—wrapped in timeless Italian elegance.
