Discover the Refinement of the 1992 FARR Yacht

Step aboard this distinguished 1992 FARR Yacht, presently moored in the scenic waters of Italy, and encounter a vessel where classic lines meet modern marine artistry. At 71 feet, this yacht embodies a balanced union of graceful aesthetics and purposeful engineering, an ideal choice for those who seek both elegant presence and seaworthy performance.

Built on a hull of durable fiberglass and plastic, the yacht promises resilience and a steady ride, while the deck—crafted from a high-quality epoxy composite—combines structural integrity with refined finish. Conceived by the acclaimed FARR YACHT DESIGN, every curve and detail reflects thoughtful naval architecture aimed at efficiency and comfort.

Below decks the layout welcomes up to eight guests into tranquil, well-proportioned accommodations, complemented by four thoughtfully appointed heads to ensure privacy and convenience during extended cruises. The separate crew quarters provide berths for two, allowing professional, unobtrusive service that preserves the intimate atmosphere for owners and guests.

Reliable propulsion comes from a Yanmar inboard engine, offering dependable power and economical operation whether cruising coastal waters or embarking on longer passages. Stores and systems are sized for extended enjoyment, with a fuel capacity of 317.01 gallons and a freshwater capacity of 158.5 gallons, affording confidence for voyages of significant range.
