OVERVIEW

Acadia, the third TC90 produced by Claasen/Vitters Jachtbouw, was delivered in 2016 to her current owner, and although several alternative interior schemes have been explored for the series, the main deck arrangement remains true to the TC90 lineage, affirming her heritage as a luxury sailing yacht and bluewater cruiser. Beneath the after deckhouse the owner's suite unfolds into a generously proportioned, luminous and airy sanctuary with direct access to the aft cockpit, while the central cockpit functions as the vessel's social nucleus—perfect for unhurried passages, multigenerational family cruising with children and grandchildren, and relaxed, crewed charter operations.

Below decks the plan reads with clear, purposeful flow: aft is the full beam master with its own en suite, progressing forward to a compact guest/utility cabin positioned opposite the entrance to the engine room. To starboard a day head and a dedicated laundry both serve the daily needs, rising toward the main deckhouse where the dining table and navigation station share sweeping, panoramic views. Further forward, a well appointed galley to port is paired with an intimate salon ideal for films, reading, cocktails and conversation.

Ahead to port the double VIP cabin offers its own en suite, mirrored to starboard by a twin bunk cabin with private facilities, and the very fore of the yacht houses the captain's cabin with a double berth, settee and en suite bathroom. In total Acadia accommodates up to seven guests plus two crew, delivering the comfort and capability expected of a performance cruiser, a classic sailing superyacht and a family friendly charter yacht.

A genuine ocean going vessel, Acadia has spent much of her life traversing the Pacific, demonstrating her qualities as a world cruising, long range passagemaker. Maintained to an exacting standard by a meticulous crew, she presents in notably fine condition.
