DETAILED INFORMATION

34' Luhrs 340 Sport Fisherman Overview

Introduced in 1982, the Luhrs Tournament 340 was an affordable, well-equipped flybridge convertible aimed at the market for family-oriented fishermen.

Her modified-V hull, with 15 degrees of transom deadrise and a warped plane for quick acceleration, is a stable low-speed fishing platform although something of a stiff ride in a chop. The cockpit is good size for a 34-footer (a built-in fish box and livewell were standard).

Below decks, the interior is hardly opulent, because after all she is a serious fishing boat but it is well suited for leisurely weekend getaways. The original layout included two staterooms, a deckhouse dinette, and oak woodwork.

A much-revised floorplan was introduced in Ultimate Catch with a single stateroom, a more open salon/galley arrangement, and an updated decor with the addition of some very attractive teak that will be pleasing to charter parties or guests. The boat also has a unique cabin ventilation system with hidden air intakes located beneath the forward bridge overhang. Additional features include a bow pulpit, fresh- and salt-water washdowns, cockpit bolsters, and a roomy flybridge with bench seating forward of the helm console.

The 342 will cruise at 19–20 knots with the extremely reliable Yanmars and reach a top speed of about 24 knots.
