There is a large hanging locker to starboard and cubbies to either side of the central double berth. There is access to plumbing and sea-cocks beneath the cabin sole, and a large storage drawer under the berth.

The cabinetry also houses a TV/DVD facing the U-shaped saloon seating to starboard. There are capacious storage lockers underneath the saloon floor, with natural light from above and ventilation from the opening hull port-lights. The table drops to form an occasional double berth with infill mattress, and aft of the seating is the main ships switching, with heater controls, generator stop/start panel, clock and barometer. The triple aft cabin is located aft of the galley to port, with a hanging locker and basin unit with drawers. There is a single berth/settee set to starboard, double berth on the centreline, two opening port-lights and an overhead hatch .

There are three steps up to the teak-soled cockpit from the saloon, which is laid out with a wet-bar and refrigerator to port, with a cushioned seat for 2 to 3 crew opposite the main helm console. The helm seat (for 2) rises on struts to reveal a large cockpit gear locker, and there is semi-circular seating around the aft cockpit table for six. The whole cockpit is covered with a blue canvas hood on stainless steel frame and hoops and GRP radar arch.

Engine and generator access is through a hinged hatch beneath the table. The two main engines are easily accessible, with five batteries boxed to starboard, fuel filters and taps further outboard, and the generator and hot water tank to port.
