Description

The Hake Yachts Seaward 32 RK is ideal for coastal cruising or island hopping. Her shoal draft affords the option of getting away from those crowded anchorages. With her keel down she sails well and can outperform many in her class. Trailer ability makes it truly a go anywhere boat.

Down below, Comazo has an open and airy feel. Just aft of the V-berth, the head compartment, to port, features a separate stall shower. This is an important amenity for comfortable cruising and unusual on a boat of this size. The salon has a U-shaped dining area to port that converts to a double bunk by lowering the table. Across the salon to starboard there are two individual seats with a tray table between. A quarter berth extends under the cockpit on the port side. The galley is opposite on the starboard quarter, with no bulkhead between it and the starboard cockpit lid; one of the more convenient features of this arrangement is the ability to pass groceries from the cockpit directly into the galley.

All of the hardware on deck and below is substantial, and the construction, fit and finish in good condition. On deck the cockpit is roomy for a boat this size and features a walk-through transom. An electric motor and cable system raise and lower the keel. Plus, there is a back system in place for raising the keel in the unlikely event of a failure. The rudder is a high-aspect ratio dagger-style that can be raised in shallow water
