SPECIFICATIONS

Overview

With her striking profile and comfortable interior, the Sea Ray 310 Sundancer was designed for upscale boaters willing to pay top dollar for a quality midsize express. This is a well-crafted boat, better finished than previous Sea Ray models and incorporating high-grade hardware, appliances and furnishings.

When the 310 was introduced in 1998, she came with an unusual floorplan that required those using kidney-shaped berth to climb over the circular dinette seat. Sea Ray dumped that plan in 1999, replacing it with a more conventional layout with an angled berth forward and a conventional opposed dinette. In both configurations, a roomy midcabin offers true seclusion thanks to a real door instead of a curtain.

The Sundancer's large cockpit has everything for relaxing and entertaining including a triple helm seat (with a flip-up seat for the driver), U-shaped aft seating, and a refreshment center with wet bar and cooler. For engine access, the entire bridge deck rises electrically at the push of a button.
