Walkthrough:

The Aicon 64' is the definition of a Euro-Style Yacht. Curved and swift exterior lines give this vessel a unique style. Huge flybridge and cockpit provide plenty of entertaining space. The interior is very well thought out; although, the exterior has a curvy feel one would imagine the interior would match, but this is not the case. The designers using linear versus rounded contours were able to provide more interior space.

The salon offers plenty of natural light with built-in u-shaped seating arrangement both on the port and starboard sides. A brand new flat screen TV aft port side connected to a 5 speaker Bose surround sound system provides the ultimate experience to catch the latest flick or your favorite DIRECTV show at sea. Step forward into the galley and find one of the key factors in their unique design. Just like in any home, guests tend to gather around the kitchen area and the designers brought this concept to the 64'. There is a low-profile island that separates the galley from the dinette in order to define both spaces; however, the galley allows owners and guests to interact with each other during meal prep since most of the yacht owners in this size range of vessel are very hands-on or even owner-operators.

Forward of the dinette/galley port side, is the lower helm with a full set of controls and a brand-new Garmin 7612 Display. Center forward are the stairs that lead to the three staterooms. In the lower, the full beam master is positioned aft with a huge low-profile bed that seats 15" from the floor. There is plenty of headroom around the boat averaging 6'8" and everyone will fall in love with the views provided by the port and starboard portholes.

Forward and to the starboard is the guest stateroom that features two twin berths and an en-suite head accessible both from the stateroom and hallway. All the way forward is the big VIP stateroom that features a queen size bed and another en-suite head.
