DETAILED INFORMATION

Overview

The Egg Harbor 43 Sport Fisherman remains one of the more handsome boats in her size class despite the fact that she's been out of production for well over a decade. Her balanced lines and muscular profile represent classic convertible styling at its best. The 43 was built on a stretched version of the Egg Harbor 41 Convertible hull with an additional 100 gallons of fuel for increased range. "Reel Lady" has a two-stateroom floorplan, featuring a single head and a mid-level galley. The teak joinery and paneling used throughout is impressive and very well crafted. Taken together, the upscale decor and roomy accommodations make the Egg 43 a comfortable boat for family cruising. Like many 1980s sportfishermen, the front windshield area was glassed over and painted to create a distinctive wraparound black "mask" surrounding the deckhouse. A pair of 685HP 671 TIB Detroit's cruise "Reel Lady" in the mid 20s and reach 27-28 knots top.
