Overview

LADY SUMMERFIELD is the realisation of a vision and the product of sophisticated design and exceptional workmanship. She offers the performance, safety and comfort required to navigate the globe. The original vision for LADY SUMMERFIELD was a vessel suitable for charter, private use or under survey. It had to display exceptional strength, quality equipment, comfort and fast sailing ability. It had to be able to go anywhere in the world.

Denis Ganley, a professional yacht designer from Auckland, New Zealand, was asked to consult with the owner and his team to turn the vision into reality. The result is regarded as one of Mr Ganley's best vessels. Professional opinion from within his industry ranks it equally or better than superior yachts of her type with her attractive appearance, gracious lines, reliability, first class equipment and sea comfort. Completed in 1997, the yacht has travelled more than 20,000 nautical miles through New Zealand, Australia and the Pacific (South, North) waters.

The attention to detail throughout the research of the hull design, the practical features and innovative systems ensure that LADY SUMMERFIELD will always be a highly admired vessel. LADY SUMMERFIELD is a yacht constructed and fitted out with systems designed for its owners to sail in comfort while having the capability to cope with extreme conditions. Whether fishing in tropical doldrums or battling liquid mountains in the Southern Ocean, LADY SUMMERFIELD is suited to the conditions. It is this unique combination that represents the true value of this vessel.
