Broker's Comments: Citing from Sam Devlin's original design notes, "I became inspired to build a bigger Godzilla-type tug, one that would have more interior room and that was large enough to allow cruising on the waters of Puget Sound or even potentially up to Southeast Alaska." This Sam Devlin design was custom built by Tom Larkin of Seattle and has proven itself worthy on at least one previous trip up the Inside Passage towards Southeast Alaska. As the Devlin Boat Company states, the Godzilla 25 is "a working boat that would happily carry you away to distant ports."

This custom Godzilla 25 design has spent many hours commuting to work with its original owner, and has spent many nights away on vacation, exploring the BC Inside Passage. In addition to the Inside Passage, this boat has ventured to a variety of Lower BC destinations and numerous ports within Puget Sound. This is not a "big boat", but a lot of thought and creative design has optimized the use of available space. This boat has proven its ability to travel and to provide safe and comfortable accommodations. I have personally reviewed the extensive notes provided by the original builder of this boat. These notes begin during the pre-build phase, continue through the many stages of the build process, and then continue to document the launch, travels, and maintenance of this boat. I am impressed with the great level of research, thought, and creativity that has gone into this custom mini tug and cruiser. She was built to be very sturdy, safe, and easy to maintain. A great deal of attention was given to optimizing the use of space and providing practical conveniences. She is clearly the source of great pride and joy. This mini tug cruiser now awaits a new owner and a new set of adventures. Where will your next adventure take you?
