1972 Jones-Goodell Fishing Vessel Embark on a Timeless Maritime Adventure with the F/V "Pursuit" Vessel Overview: Year of Build: 1972, by the renowned Jones/Goodell in Tacoma, Washington. Acquired: Master Kyle Vanderpool and family, 1984. Type: Commercial fishing vessel, designed for both coastal and distant waters. Maritime Legacy: The F/V "Pursuit," a testament to the art of shipbuilding, has voyaged across the North and South Pacific. Renowned for its strength and reliability, it's been a pioneer in albacore tuna fishing, even near Midway Island. Global Explorations: This vessel is not just a fishing boat; it's a bearer of stories from distant lands. The Vanderpools have steered her through the mesmerizing seas of Tahiti, Rarotonga, the Cook Islands, and beyond, even venturing within 100 miles of Easter Island. A Family's Seafaring Home: The F/V "Pursuit" has also been a cherished home. Master & Mrs. Vanderpool, along with their three daughters, have lived aboard, immersing in the maritime way of life. Now, their grandchildren also join, learning the age-old tales of the sea. A Platform for Research and Development: The vessel's versatility extends beyond fishing and family life. It has been instrumental in various research and development projects, assisting entities like JPL, Scripps Institute, and the Department of the Navy. The Spirit of the F/V "Pursuit": More than just a vessel, the F/V "Pursuit" is a symbol of resilience and adventure. It stands as a proud guardian for those who seek the thrill of the sea, whether close to shore or in distant, uncharted waters. Future Potential: The F/V "Pursuit" is ripe with possibilities. For those with a vision, it presents a unique opportunity for a yacht re-fit, transforming it into a luxurious vessel for leisurely sea adventures. Alternatively, its proven track record in the tuna fishing industry makes it an excellent choice for continuing its legacy as a commercial fishing vessel. Whether it's embarking on a new life as a sophisticated yacht or continuing to reign in the tuna fishing realm, the F/V "Pursuit" is ready to sail into the next chapter of its storied journey.
